RACE TRACK SUPERSTITIONS, BY HAYDON FONES.

RACING PUBLIC IS STILL GUESSING.

Silence of Stewards Regarding Outcome of Researches in Form Reversals Wearying.

there will be any tears shed when the curtain is drawn at the conclusion of the last race. It has been a meeting full of queer form. There have been recounted for on legitimate grounds.

The stewards acted in but one case that of Louis Smith, whose fate is still in the hands of the Jockey Club. So far as is known the stewards have investigated no other case. If they have done so they have not made public the results of their investigations.

The policy of the stewards seems to be to work very quietly and leave the public in the dark as to the outcome of their researches. They do this, it is said, so as to avoid talk and scandal. But talk and scandal is not avoided by this method of procedure.

Public in the Dark.

The public sees a reversal of form, comments on it and wonders if the stewards will investigate. After a time another reversal comes along and there is more talk. Still no sign from the stewards. Other reversals follow. Public clamors about the inaction of stewards. Newspapers echo the public talk. Thousands of people read the racing reports and wonder if fraud is rampant at Westchester. Every one blames the stewards for inaction. They may be working hard and investigating every form reversal, but the public does not know it. The very policy of science is the one that permits the public to go ahead and clamor and exaggerate. Suppose, on the other nand, the stewards would send a notice to the press stand reading something after this fashion:

"A seeming reversal in form on the part of — (naming a horse) has been investigated by the stewards and they find that the cause of the reversal was due to legitimate causes, as follows:

(Causes specified.)"

At once the public clamor would end.
The people would feel satisfied that the stewards were conscientiously working in the interests of pure racing. But the policy of secrecy and apparent contempt
for the public is all wrong.

Newspapers would not comment so severely on form reversals if the critics were satisfied that the stewards were allive to the happenings of every race.
There would be a feeling of contentment that if fraud was perpetrated the guilty ones would be punished. Of all the "eversals of form that have been seen at Sheepshead and Westchester not one has been investigated (as far as seen at Sneepshead and Westchester not one has been investigated (as far at the public is aware of) except in the case of Merry Acrobat, which resulted in the suspension of Louis Smith. And that action, it is believed, was only taken because complaint was made of Smith's ride by Jack Odom, trainer of Merry Acrobat.
